Preservation of Public Records. Attention of Congress should be called to the urgent need of making provision for the safe storage and preservation of the records of the public departments, and of Congress are constantly engaged in preparing, examining and in handling papers which, when finally acted on, must under the laws be kept, consulted. Yet it is almost impossible to determine which of these papers may after a time be found of great importance to save the United States loss of money, or to vindicate the character of a public officer under unjust suspicion, or to convict a defaulter or criminal. Under existing laws it is forbidden to destroy any of these public records, except cancelled bonds and currency. The accumulation is immense, and it increases constantly. The number of clerks in the various executive departments is less than during the war, and extensive and most costly additions have been made to the public offices, yet they are probably at this time more crowded than ever before. Piles of papers take and fill all the place and space vacated by reduction in the number of clerks.

The burning of the Patent Office is a consequence of this accumulation, and the inspection by a board of engineers, called after that conflagration, showed that scarce a public building in Washington is free from similar accumulation of inflammable material, filling up all the out of the way corners, all the dark rooms and all the roof spaces of executive and of legislative offices. The Capitol itself is thus endangered.

In the Quartermaster General's office are many thousand, perhaps twelve or thirteen thousand, claims for quartermaster stores taken by the army in loyal states during the war, with the testimony for and against them, furnished by claimants and their attorneys, or collected by the agents of the Quartermaster's department employed in the investigation. They constitute a very large bulk of papers. Heretofore it has been the custom of the Quartermaster General, when he has completed the examination, under the law of 1864, of any one of these claims, to send all the papers, often voluminous, to the Third Auditor for preservation, whether proved to be just or no; but the file room of the Third Auditor, it appears, is now so burdened that that officer has been compelled to request the Quartermaster General hereafter to send him only such claims as he reports favorably for allowance. The others accumulate in the building occupied by the Quartermaster General, and are so much fuel to add to the dangerous condition of that office. These records ought to be preserved; they embrace the evidence which defeats claims against the Treasury amounting to many millions, perhaps

The proper provision for safekeeping of these and of all records and papers not in current use, is a fire-proof Hall of Records. It a storehouse, but it will greatly relieve buildings which have already cost 20 or 30 million and which are now obstructed and endangered by these piles of inflammable material.

The best fire-proof material is bright. The best fire-proof material is bricks. We think that it should cover a large space of ground and be of a single story, with paved floor and fire-proof roof, and divided by firewalls into spaces of moderate size, so secured that even a considerable fire would be entirely confined to the cell in which it originated. Such a building without cellars or upper floors, of moderate height, thoroughly drained and ventilated, and not heated, and therefore not liable to be set on fire, would be dry and safe, and not costly; and such a building ought to be at once erected in a central situation, convenient to the executive offices, for all executive records. Another should be erected near the Capitol for Congressional records. There is plenty of vacant ground in Washington, and it is not necessary to pile story upon story. $200,000 would provide all that would be needed for some years.

If there is any gentleman who hasn't yet been appointed a notary public let him step to the front and give the public a chance to view

Rarus has trotted a mile in 2:131/4, and Goldsmith Maid must abdicate as queen of the turf. Rarus will give way in his turn as a faster trotter is developed, and no one can predict how far the record will be reduced. When one thinks how the once famous 2:40 record has been steadily lowered, he cannot expect the present figures to remain long unchanged. If matters go on in this way some new motor must be discovered capable of producing more rapid motion than steam, or we may imagine our horses outstripping the cars in speed for short distances.

Now, we will have the Vulcan war over again. Mr. Lewis Swift, of Rochester, N. Y., says that he, also, discovered Vulcan while observing the eclipse at Denver. It is urged, on the other hand, that Mr. Swift did not call his discovery Vulcan at that time, but left the impression that his search for the supposilious planet had been unsuccessful.

"What is Wrong in Life Insurance?" is the title of a long article recently published in the Cincinnati Gazette. Well, as a general thing, a few of the inside managers get away with all the money. After that it doesn't matter much "What is wrong."

We haven't yet seen the name of Cohen as one of the witnesses before the labor question congressional commission in New York. Why is this?

In connection with the report that Kearney's speeches through Massachusetts will be prepared for him, his remark-"for $2.50 I can always hire a man to write a grammatical speech"-acquires a certain interest. But in view of the glorious results expected from the delivery of these productions, is not $2.50 star. yation wages?

It took 1,235 ballots to nominate a democratic candidate for Congress in Ohio. What the country really wants is an invention for increasing the balloting powers of a nominating convention, so that it will not become exhausted after a few thousand ballots. No man should be put up for Congress without due consideration.

Ex-Gov. Hendricks was clear and decided in his speech at Indianapolis yesterday. He was decided in his intentions not to express any opinions whatever, and was clearly suc-Cessful.

The numerous objections urged against ele vated railroads by the unhappy beings con demned to live along their routes have resulted in the passage of a resolution by the common council of Brooklyn against granting permission to build steam roads on any or all the routes recommended by the rapid transit commission. This action gives the quietus to schemes for extending such roads in various parts of Brooklyn. The city authorities have discovered a more effectual way than by the employment of Edison to prevent the noise of elevated railways. When Brooklyn finds her present facilities for transportation inadequate, and discovers that her streets are too crowded for ordinary railways, she may be expected to follow the advice of the English papers and choose underground in preference to elevated roads. Or perhaps she expects that before long her citizens will be flying from point to point in air ships, and that all kinds of railroads will be superseded.

It is a good bit of news which comes from New London, that a lot of dutiable goods brought there by naval officers on the U.S. ship St. Mary's is to be seized by the customs officers and confiscated under the revenue laws. This abuse has been going on so long that naval officers cruising in foreign parts have come to regard the smuggling of goods for themselves and friends as one of their vested rights, and it is high time it were broken up. The claim that the commander of the vessel is "ignorant of the laws relative to customs duties" is just too touching for anything. He ought to be translated to private life, in order that he might read up a little.

We learn, upon the authority of a member of the Chinese embassy, that the visit of Mr. Chin, the senior Embassador, to Hartford, is to consult with his associate, Mr. Wing, and to rest for a few days in the "Mission House," while preparations are made here for the embassy. It is perhaps not generally known, but it is a fact, that the Chinese government owns a spacious building in Hartford in which the itself. Thousands of clerks in Washington | entire embassy can be accommodated and cared for by their own countrymen. At that point they will tarry for a few days, simply to prepare for their presentation to the Presibut of which comparatively few are ever again | dent and their permanent residence in Washington.
